Please tell us about yourself and why you want to serve.

Why are you interested in serving on a board or commission?

---

I have lived in Raleigh since May of 2007. Since that time, I've watched our city grow, become more diverse, and face both challenges and opportunities that many couldn't have anticipated. My wife, Rachel, and I, along with our two children, love Raleigh and have fully immersed ourselves in the community. What excites us about Raleigh is the ever growing number of opportunities. To me, the work the Centennial Authority is doing exemplifies, in so many ways, the incredibly unique opportunities Raleigh has to continue growing and flourish. I am a lawyer and lobbyist. And for 14 years, I've represented clients in front of the Executive Branch and the North Carolina General Assembly. I've watched with a careful eye as the city, county, and state have coordinated on transformational projects -- such as what lies ahead at the Lenovo Center and beyond. For years, I've served on boards around Raleigh. I've deliberately gotten involved with organizations in which I feel confident that I can add value. The Centennial Authority board is no different. I currently represent roughly 60 clients in my practice -- including Fortune 500 companies, small non profits, the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians and others. On a daily and weekly basis, I'm charged with navigating the political dynamics our state and city face with a divided government. Most of my clients require that I work with Democrats, Republicans, the North Carolina General Assembly, and the Executive Branch. It can often be challenging, but understanding how to message priorities with all stakeholders and policy makers is the key to my job and, I believe, an important attribute for anyone serving on this board. The Centennial Authority is an important part of the ever growing ecosystem of our region. And in order for the city, county, and state to work together to ensure the success of this project and future projects, it will take individuals with the experience of navigating complex problems and the complex power dynamics. It would be an absolute honor to be a part of this organization and to be a part of one of the most exciting opportunities our city faces.

Work Experience

January 2025 - Present: President and Co-Founder; The Raleigh Group September 2012 - December 2025 - Attorney and Partner; Manning Fulton & Skinner May 2007 - August 2009 - Special Assistant to State Treasurer Richard H. Moore In January of this year, after 14 years at Manning Fulton & Skinner, I started my own firm that exclusively focuses on lobbying. Our firm currently represents roughly 60 clients -- ranging from Fortune 500 companies to small non profits. Every year since 2020, I have been recognized by policy makers around the state as one of the top ten most effective lobbyists in the state. Only three other lobbyists in the state have received that recognition every single year. I am incredibly proud to work with a team that zealously advocates for our clients positions and works well with members of the legislature and the executive branch. I genuinely believe that my professional experience will be an asset to this board.
